In the Right Time

My party planning business has been slow. I have not even had a call for a job for 2 weeks. Yesterday I decided to thank Hashem for all the jobs in the past, and trusted that I will get a job in the right time. Night was approaching, still no calls yet. At 9:30pm, I received a call for a huge job! Thank You Hashem!

Saved by Hashem

My daughter designed a stunning online album, at one of her courses in Seminary. Last week, the teacher decided to save her album on a USB stick to send to print at a company. She couldn't understand why hers was chosen from the rest of the class but was happy that it was to be printed. Yesterday, she came home with excitement, and ran to say Tefillas Todah! As she walked into the computer room for her graphics course, a girl came telling her that she accidentally deleted her whole album file, and there was no way to retrieve it! She then realized exactly why the teacher decided to save hers from the rest! Thank You Hashem for looking out for us and avoiding disappointments in advance!

Sleeping Beauty

My baby was crying all night and would not stop. I promised to thank Hashem in public if she lets me sleep a little until the morning. Thank You Hashem, she fell asleep a little while after that, and slept until the morning!

Public Thanking

I have been going through very rough times, and constantly keep on thanking Hashem throughout the day, but never did so publicly. Yesterday, I had a medical scare, and was waiting to see the doctor today. As I was whispering "Thank You Hashem", once again it struck me to say that for the first time I will publicly say "Thank You Hashem" after my appointment, and all works out well. The Koach of just thinking of saying "Thank You Hashem" publicly is unbelievable! When all is resolved, I will thank Hashem publicly again.

Thought of the Week

קריעת ים סוף, פרנסה

The קדושות לוי זצוק"ל says that at the parting of the Red Sea the water did not split all at once but slowly, as the Almighty enjoyed it so much as the Jews were constantly thanking Him while passing through, and if He had split the sea all at once then they would've only thanked once. So too is פרנסה hinted in the parting of the Red Sea, how Hashem provides a livelihood every single day and not all at once so that every Jew should thank Hashem every day which brings the greatest pleasure for the Creator when a person thanks and thanks without ceasing.
